PREFATORY NOTE

The making of these abstracts has been my interesting occupation for several years past. Begun at first with a view to tracing my own pedigree, in course of time it became evident that they would be of great use to others, even to many not bearing the name of Parry. I therefore decided to continue till all the Wills and Administrations, down to the latest date permitted by the rules, should be finished. They will, I hope, assist many in tracing their own pedigrees. In the event of there being a sufficient demand for these abstracts, I may at a later date issue a volume of wills to be found at other Registries, such as Gloucester, Lichfield, St. Asaph, etc. Places of residence of testators, when not found in the wills themselves, have been sought for in the Probate Act books, and those so found have been entered between square brackets. I decline to be responsible for the spelling of Welsh place-names, which are left as spelt in the originals.

It should be borne in mind in using wills for genealogical purposes that cousin often means nephew or niece, and mother-in-law, stepmother. Also brother-in-law sometimes means half-brother, and a brother-in-law (in the modern sense) is sometimes styled brother. Servants may be relations of testators, and because a man is employed in trade, or is an ordinary seaman, it by no means follows he is not of good family. Widows and wives in Wales often kept their maiden names.

To my w., Ann, the house I live in, all plate &c. and the interest on my £500 Exchequer Annuity at 3 %, of the year 1736, with remainder to my niece, w. of James Morgan, of Lincoln's Inn, Esq. Her d., Catherine Emma, sp., a minor. My w. exx. [No witnesses.]
Codicil, 2 Aug. 1751. Niece Morgan exx. in case of death of my wife. Notwithstanding the above disposition of my effects, I declare that neither my w. nor my relations (niece Morgan excepted) deserve anything at my hands, for, being now grown very infirm & wanting of consolation & society, they have estranged themselves entirely from me, and even my very wife has become so clamorous that my life is a burden too heavy to bear & my hourly prayers are to be delivered soon out of this world. Nevertheless let my will so stand & God forgive them for all their want of natural affection.
Codicil, 24 Sep. 1752. Another long codicil bitterly upbraiding his relations.
Codicil, 25 Oct. 1752. Mr. Morgan only to accompany my corpse to the grave. To Dr. Napier, two folio volumes of Chambers' Dictionary. To my niece Morgan, the small diamond ring with my child's hair set in it & my late wife's wedding ring. My sword & watch to Charles Morgan.
